What we do

The Managing Board

The Managing Board acts as the executive body of the Foundation. It ensures that activities fulfill the mission of the World Economic Forum and acts as its representative to outside parties. For more information about the Managing Board, visit www.weforum.org/managingboard

The Foundation Board

The Foundation Board is responsible for inspiring business and public confidence by ensuring a flawless standard of governance. Board members are individuals with unique leadership experience from business, politics, academia and civil society.

The Board's role includes: managing the statutes of the World Economic Forum; appointing new members; determining and monitoring execution of Forum strategies, and defining the roles of the Managing Board and committees.

Membership criteria includes integrity, global vision, leadership experience and participation in world affairs.

In November, William Turner handed over his responsibilities as a Vice-Chairman of the Foundation Board, but remains a member. Henry McKinnell was unanimously elected to succeed him. During the year, the Forum welcomed Maurice Lévy, Chairman and CEO of Publicis Group, France, as a member of the Foundation Board.

On 30 June 2005, the Foundation Board consisted of:
 Klaus Schwab, Executive Chairman
 Josef Ackermann, Vice-Chairman
 Kurt Alig, Secretary
 Peter Brabeck-Letmathe

The committees of the Foundation Board

The Foundation Board appoints four committees from among its members:

- The Executive Committee prepares the decisions of the Foundation Board and oversees the Managing Board
- The Audit Committee ensures compliance with all financial, accounting and control processes
- The Evaluation and Remuneration Committee recommends candidates for positions on the Managing Board and monitors their performance
- The Mission Compliance Committee reviews Forum policies, strategies and activities in light of its mission

Structure

The Forum's structure consists of six core departments: Community Management, Community Development, the Global Institute for Partnership and Governance, the Centre for Strategic Insight, Communications, and Events and Resources Management.

Community Management

Community Management is responsible for managing relations with the 1,000 world-leading companies that make up the Forum's key constituency. The 30-strong team focuses on forging relationships with global communities of business leaders drawn from around 15 industry sectors.

It is committed to fostering engagement between Forum members through the Industry Partnerships Programme. This year's priorities include building on the programme's early success by expanding it to include at least eight of its 15 industry sectors.

Community Development

The Community Development team delivers value to members and potential members via a series of regional and national meetings.

The department has six regional teams who focus on the most important regional and global trends to understand how they affect an increasingly interconnected world.

Global Institute for Partnership and Governance

The Global Institute for Partnership and Governance was created by the World Economic Forum to broaden the application of public-private partnerships to some of the world's most pressing problems.

The Institute consolidates all of our task forces and initiatives and is a comprehensive resource for companies seeking to engage with the public sector to tackle global issues.

Centre for Strategic Insight

The Centre for Strategic Insight works with the Forum's network of communities, such as business leaders, NGOs and policy-makers to create relevant strategic insight.

The Centre has four core teams, focusing on business insight, global insight, economics and competitiveness, and global and regional agendas.

Communications

The Communications department consists of three teams, focusing on the World Economic Forum's website, publications and media relations.

The three teams work together to publicize the Forum's work and to explain to members and non-members alike how it delivers on its mission.

Events and Resources Management

Each year the World Economic Forum brings together thousands of decision-makers in meetings and regional summits to address the most crucial issues facing mankind.

To maintain quality and effectiveness, we have a team with unique knowledge and experience in developing such high-calibre events.
